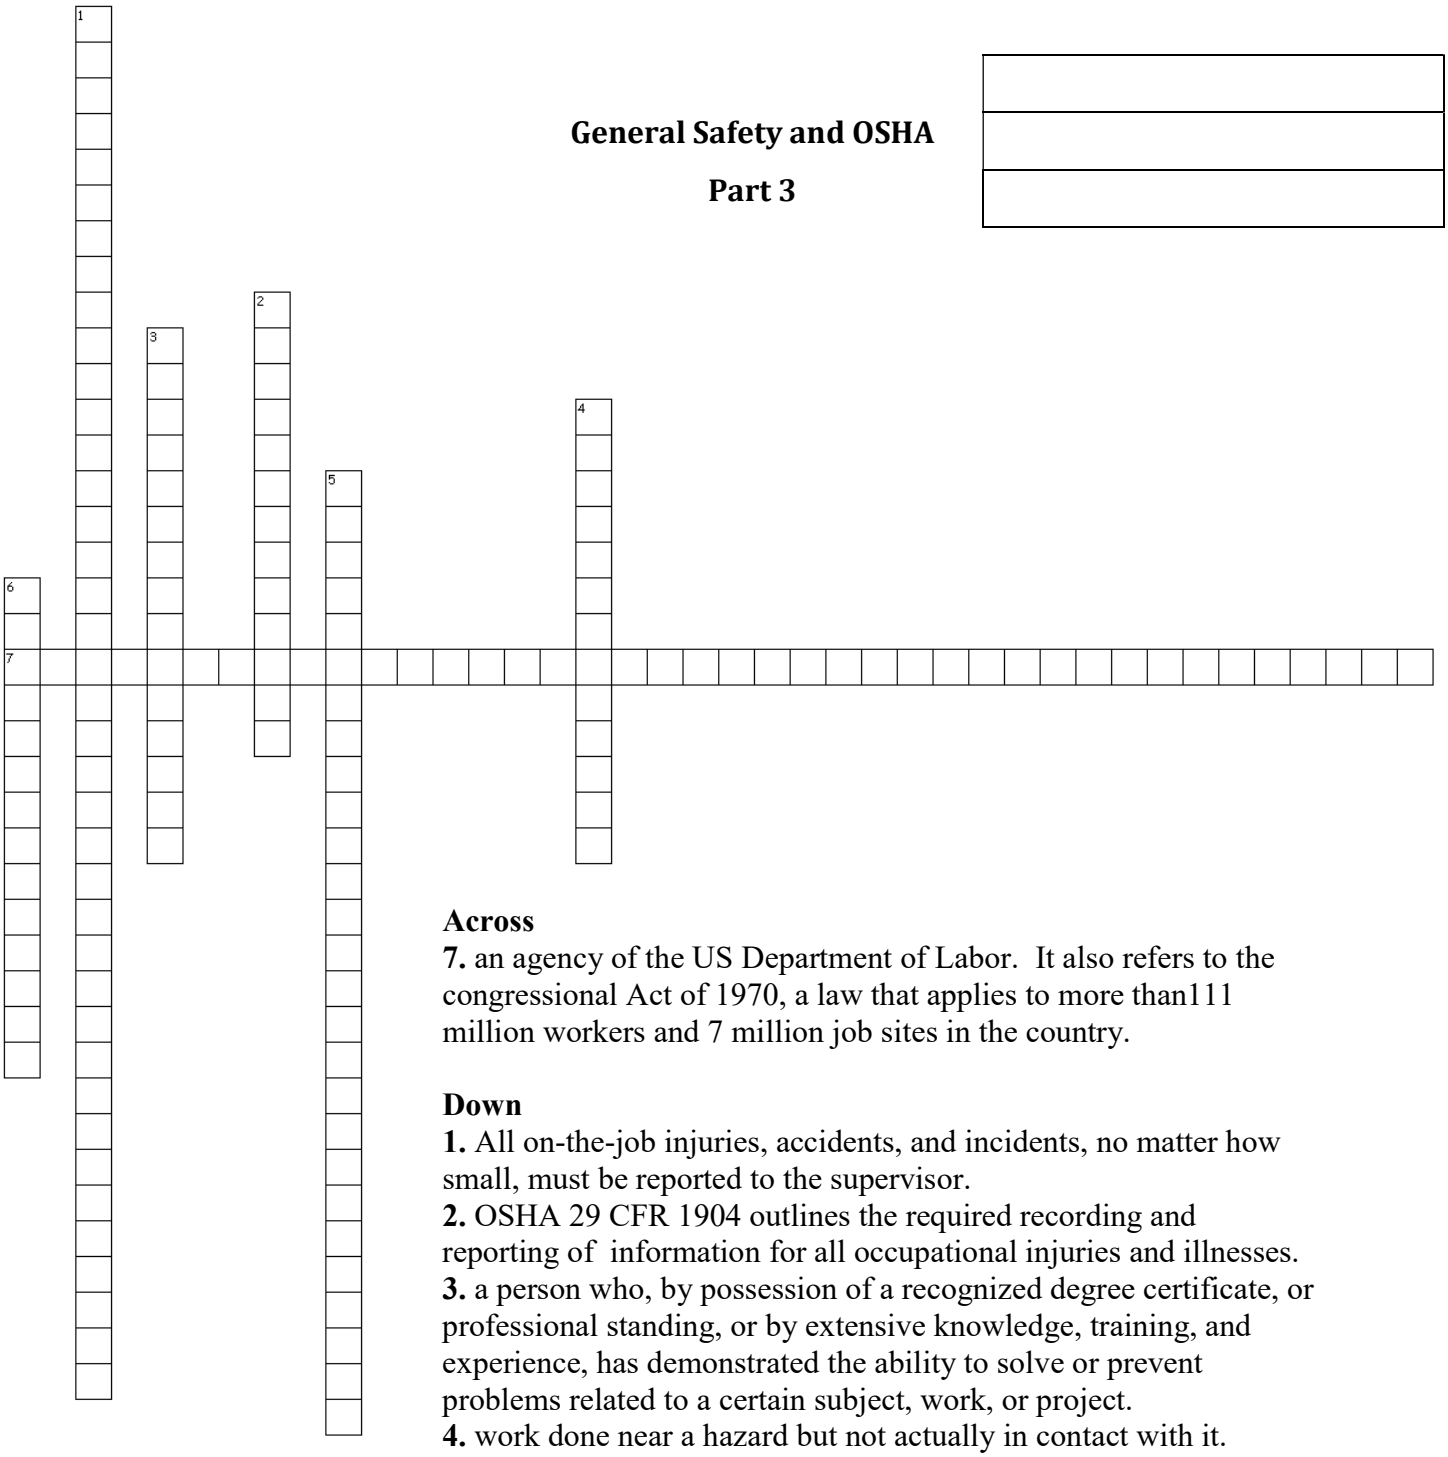
General Safety and OSHA

Part 3



Across

7. an agency of the US Department of Labor. It also refers to the congressional Act of 1970, a law that applies to more than111 million workers and 7 million job sites in the country.

Down

1. All on-the-job injuries, accidents, and incidents, no matter how small, must be reported to the supervisor.
2. OSHA 29 CFR 1904 outlines the required recording and reporting of information for all occupational injuries and illnesses.
3. a person who, by possession of a recognized degree certificate, or professional standing, or by extensive knowledge, training, and experience, has demonstrated the ability to solve or prevent problems related to a certain subject, work, or project.
4. work done near a hazard but not actually in contact with it.
5. equipment or clothing designed to prevent or reduce injuries.
6. an unplanned event that resulted in damage to tools, materials, or equipment, but no injuries.